Iconic Brum nightclub Snobs opens in its new home on the golden mile

The nightclub brand synonymous with growing up or studying in Birmingham reopened on Broad Street this week with a student night on Wednesday followed by more clubbing tonight (Friday) and tomorrow.

The venue began life in Paradise Street in 1972 before switching to Smallbrook Queensway in 2014. Its last night there on 1 March was sold out, with dancers living it up one more time right to the last record. Now Snobs has opened in the former Velvet Music Rooms site between Granville Street and Bishopsgate Street.

And it might spark a Broad St boom!

City architect Adam Tibbatts has been masterminding the creation of Snobs 3.0 from his Grade II Cemetery Lodge office in Warstone Lane, with the fruits of his vision unveiled this week inside the former Velvet Music Rooms site.

Now Adam predicts: "As well as being part of the city's heritage, Snobs will be the catalyst that helps to revive all of Broad Street's golden mile which will get busier and busier."
